• We make our fortunes, and we call them fate.—Lord Beaconsfield

EDUCATION does not mean teaching people what they do not know. It means teaching them to behave as they do not behave. It is not teaching the youth the shapes of letters and the tricks of numbers, and then leaving them to turn their arithmetic to roguery, and their literature to lust. It means, on the contrary, training them into the perfect exercise and kingly continence of their bodies and souls. It is a painful, continual and difficult work to be done by kindness, by watching, by warning, by precept, and by praise, but above all—by example

— John Ruskin.

The crest and crowning of all good,
Life's final star, is Brotherhood;
For it will bring again to earth
Her long-lost Poesy and Mirth;
Will send new light on every face,
A kingly power upon the race.
And till it comes, we men are slaves,
And travel downward to the dust of graves.

Come, clear the way, then, clear the way:
Blind creeds and kings have had their day.
Break the dead branches from the path:
Our hope is in the aftermath—
Our hope is in heroic men,
Star-led to build the world again.
To this event the ages ran:
Make way for Brotherhood—make way for Man!

"Brotherhood," by Edwin Markham

Brotherhood is not just a Bible word. Out of comradeship can come and will come the happy life for all. The underdog can and will lick his weight in the wildcats of the world. —Herwood Broun, The Fifty-first Birthday

The feeling of friendship is like that of being comfortably filled with roast beef; love, like being enlivened with champagne.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, (from Boswell's Life of Samuel Johnson)

Waisting Away

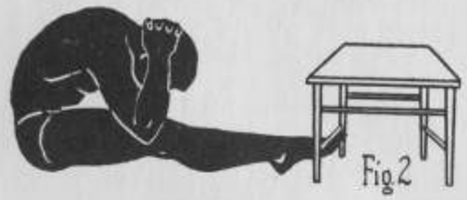

Fig.2

A soft, flabby, unmuscular waistline ruins the appearance of many a guy who otherwise might be admired for his physique. Perhaps more than any other feature of the body, the waist is the barometer of physical condition. The average man who loves his coffee with cream, his pie, and his beer, sooner or later finds himself spreading in the mid-section. Exercise alone probably won't keep that trim youthful waist for you. Eating is important, too. But assuming one goes easy on foods which tend to build up fatty tissue (often first deposited in the form of an unsightly paunch), exercise can help maintain or achieve a trim, muscular waist.

Whether you use weights or not, along with your push-ups you can easily do sit-ups and leg raises. They're doubtless the most effective exercise for keeping down the waistline. And you don't need a gym for this kind of work-out. Sit-ups can easily be performed on a chair placed sideways next to a bed or some heavy piece of furniture under which you can anchor your feet. (See Fig. 1 & 2). Then, with your hands behind your head, you can go to it! If you have a tendency to spread, at least three sets of not less than fifteen repetitions should be performed every other day.

Leg raises can just as easily be done at home. Place your hands behind your head and grasp the bed springs .or table top) for support. (See Fig. 3 & 4). And then raise away! Use the same number of reps and sets as with sit-ups.

Better watch your waist! Once it has spread, it's no easy job to trim it down.

Get out of the Obituaries

Ever hear the story about the man who began his day by checking through the obituary columns to make sure his name wasn't there?

Many people are, for all practical purposes, "dead". They don't realize it because they've never really been alive. They drag themselves through each day and think of themselves as "living" when they are actually only "existing."

Occasionally such living corpses catch a glint of what it might be like to really live. With a little effort devoted to a program of physical betterment, they discover what it's really like to live . . . to look forward eagerly to each new day . . . to enjoy each day to the fullest . . . to look back on each day with a feeling of pride and accomplishment.

Good health spells the difference between just existing . . . and really living. If you suspect that your life is a little on the dead side, give some thought to a program of physical improvement through bodybuilding.

Follow your thoughts with action . . . and you'll be surprised at what you've missed all these years.

If You Have PIMPLES . . .

"Unless pimples are emotional in origin, a healthy body and a healthy skin usually will throw them off. Here are a few simple rules to help prevent or heal them:

1. Avoid the excessive use of sweets. Also cut down on cream soups, white sauces and spicy foods and sauces. Do not eat fried foods of any kind.

2. Include in the diet, fresh or stewed fruits, simple desserts made of gelatin or milk, lots of raw and cooked vegetables, and as much milk and water as possible.

3. Lots of sunshine.

4. Take a hot bath daily, and be sure to use soap and water on the face at night, drying it gently. A dash of cold water, right after the hot, will stimulate circulation.

5. Never squeeze a pimple. you risk spreading infection and leaving a scar."

SURE, a golden tan looks terrific, but this year, play it smart and get your coat of copper the easy way. Here are three tips.

1. Start early. Your skin has been under wraps for months so give it its first exposure early in the spring when the sun's rays are still mild. When real beach time arrives, you'll already be tanned.

2. Take it slow. A few minutes a day, gradually building up the time spent in the open, will give you a deeper, richer tan than a concentrated session which leads to burns, peeling, etc.

3. Use a lotion . . . especially if you tend to burn easily. Common baby oil is just as good as the commercial tanning lotions.

THE EASY WAY TO SUPPLY THE PROTEIN YOUR BODY NEEDS!

Twenty-four hours a day, the body works as one big chemical factory, converting the foods which are eaten into a form which can be used for tissue growth and repair: according to a REPORT FROM THE FOOD AND NUTRITION BOARD, NATIONAL ACADEMY OF SCIENCES — NATIONAL RESEARCH COUNCIL IN WASHINGTON, D.C. THE IDEA OF USING AMINO ACIDS TO SUPPLEMENT THE DIET IS AN ATTRACTIVE ONE. The essential amino acids are as follows: Lysine, Valine, Tryptophan, Methionine, Histidine, Phenylalanine, Leucine, Isoleucine, Threonine, and Arginine. If a protein dietary supplement is to be effective, it should include all of the above components.

To me, fair friend, you never can be old;
For as you were when first your eye I eyed,
Such seems your beauty still. Three Winters cold
Have from the forests shook three Summers' pride;
Three beauteous Springs to yellow Autumn turn'd
In process of the seasons have I seen,
Three April perfumes in three hot Junes burn'd,
Since first I saw you fresh, which yet are green,
Ah! yet doth beauty, like a dial-hand,
Steal from his figure, and no pace perceived;
So your sweet hue, which methinks still doth stand,
Hath motion, and mine eye may be deceived;
For fear of which, hear this, thou age unbred;
Ere you were born was beauty's summer dead.

LOSE WEIGHT OR NO CHARGE

TOO MANY MARRIAGES ANNUALLY GO ON THE ROCKS. THE MAIN REASON HAS BEEN FOUND TO BE AN ENORMOUS LACK OF KNOWLEDGE REGARDING MARITAL RELATIONS. TOO MANY WHO GET MARRIED DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO AFTER THE HONEYMOON IS OVER! THIS IS WHY A BURNING QUESTION BEGGING FOR AN ANSWER THE WORLD OVER IS:

ARE YOU SEXUALLY IMPOTENT?

by Carlson Wade

The root of all sexual pleasure lies in two distinct functions:

1) The healthy desire to indulge in sexual activities.
2) The physical possibilities to faithfully carry out the desire.

A lot of men have a growing fear that when they approach middle-age, they are going to lose their virility and their basic function as males—in fact, it has been distinctly proven that the fear of impotence actually brings about a cessation of sexual activities rather than any physical causes whatsoever. Men become impotent because they are either physically or mentally restricted. For instance, glandular disturbances may limit the ability a man has with which to perform normal and healthy sexual relations. Or, a disease like mumps may affect the testicles so that an erection may be possible but ejaculation often difficult. Sterility is caused by certain diseases as well. If a man has a lessening desire in sex and does not seem to want to participate in activities, he should obtain a thorough physical examination to see if physical imperfections could be corrected so that he will have the natural desire to have sexual activities.

By and large, men lose their desire for sex because of their mental attitudes. Not all cases of impotence are restricted to middle-aged males; in fact, many divorces take place when the wife complains that the man is the frigid partner, unable to sustain an erection long enough to produce satisfaction to both of them. An examination takes place and the man is pronounced completely healthy in every respect. He lacks a sexual desire because something is wrong in his marriage, not his body. One such typical case concerned Martin and Alice. Both in their late 20's and possessing good health, they appeared before the marriage counsellor complaining that Martin could not satisfy his wife. At first, they had intercourse about three times a week, with mutual satisfaction. Gradually, it was reduced to once a week, once every fortnight until Martin made it plain that if he never did anything again, he was perfectly content.

Copyright 1957 by New World Enterprises Syndicate, Inc.

It took much psychotherapy before it was brought out that they had never changed their position during coitus, during their entire marital period. Martin started by slowly removing the garments that Alice wore. This originally pleased both of them during their honeymoon and helped to gradually arouse their passions. When both were naked, Martin delighted himself and Alice in the usual amount of foreplay. He stroked and fondled her erogenous zones, stimulating her desires as well as his own. His ever tender and caressing fingers knew which areas of her body produced sighs of ecstatic delight. Their climax was mutual and both fell into a deep sleep afterward.

However... after seven years of marriage, this particular routine grew so monotonous that neither of them thought of it as stimulating. Alice knew exactly what Martin was going to do. The novelty and freshness wore off and both grew tired of it. Routine can be exhausting to anyone and this applies to a married couple in affairs of sex. The marriage counsellor discussed different positions. For instance, any number of non-coital sexual relations could produce satisfaction to both. This opened new worlds of pleasure to the young couple and Martin no longer experienced a lack of desire. Each affair was different and the variety offered an endless amount of delight.

Self-same routine can ruin anybody's desire in sexual activities. Pleasure in sex depends basically upon curiosity and surprise. When the man knows what is going to come next (as does the woman) some of the interest is lost. Impotence then results in which the man cannot achieve a natural erection and is incapable of performing sexual activities.

In his book, Sexual Feeling In Married Men and Women, Dr. G. Lombard Kelly advises that highly satisfactory results can be brought about in the male partner if the interested wife does her share also. She must understand that the husband is often as much in need of heavy foreplay (heavy "petting") around his erogenous zones as the woman. She must not only be an adept petter but must frequently dabble as an abdominal masseur, particularly around her partner's highly erogenous areas. This can be expected to produce pleasant relations between physically and mentally normal people; for it must be understood by both mates that successful love-play is only accomplishable on a harmonious reciprocal level. And too often the wife is at fault. She lies back, waiting for the man to do everything. Her cooperation is important in developing a healthy sex urge in the husband.

William J. Fielding offers some very sound information in his best-selling authoritative book, Sex And The Love Life: "In psychic impotence, the trouble is due to some experience in the individual's life which has caused him to lose confidence in his virility, either with respect to some particular woman or all women. He fears or imagines, he is sexually weak or there is some sexual taboo present, and this feeling is so pronounced that it dominates his sexual life—although he usually is not aware of the existence or the real cause."

A young couple, deciding to be thrifty, moved in with her family following their marriage. The walls of their bedroom were thin; during the hot summer months they kept their door open. The man was so afraid the others in the house would hear the squeaking of the bedsprings and gasps of joy during coitus, that he froze up. Try as hard as he could, he could not sustain an erection long enough to produce ejaculation. This form of impotence was based on fear of being discovered and overheard. He later complained that he was dreadfully afraid that his father-in-law, hearing the sounds of normal coitus, might come into the room and put on the light to see if something was wrong. He was horrified at the thought of being seen in the act that he just could not become sexually stimulated. When they moved to an apartment of their own, this new freedom produced an exhilarating effect. Both were able to let their joys and emotions run free and they had a satisfactory marriage after that.

Men need stimulation as much as women. The fallacy is that the man is completely aggressive and the woman fully passive. Sometimes, the man has a desire to be caressed and fondled. Without this foreplay, he cannot become stimulated. An understanding of his erogenous zone is vital if his "impotence" is to be removed. His area of stimulation consists of the inside of his thighs, the underside of his testicles and the extreme tip of his penis. If a comparatively young man complains that he cannot become stimulated through his own activities, then the woman should seize the initiative, become slightly aggressive and use massaging techniques upon the areas outlined above. This will produce an erection. If not, psychotherapeutic treatment is necessary since the problem goes deeper.

Age has relatively little to do with capabilities. If a man in his mid-50's is in good physical health, recieving proper nourishment from adequate meals and is not suffering from malnutrition, he should have a normal sex desire and be able to carry out that desire to mutual satisfaction. Most men feel that just because they're in their mid 40's or 50's, desire is gone. This feeling itself causes impotence. The fears need to be eliminated and when this feeling of inadequacy is successfully removed from the man's thoughts, new desires then take place and he is able to enjoy regular sexual activities.

You've heard a lot about "state of mind" being present in many ailments. A hypochondriac imagines that he has an appendicitis attack and goes through all the symptoms of pain...including complete unconsciousness. A thorough physical examination reveals that his appendix is not harmed or in danger at all. Yet, he suffers just the same. Because he thinks he is sick. Apply the same example to sexual functions. Telling yourself that you're impotent often produces a psychic simulation of being inadequate. Change your state of mind and become more constructive in your thinking. Tell yourself that you're as virile as ever—be more positive in your thinking and not negative and you won't be worrying as to why "are you sexually impotent?"

GEMS of WISDOM from EXISTENTIALISM

Lichtenberg:

All the mischief in the world may be put down to the general indiscriminate veneration of old laws, customs and old ideologies.

....What with our premature and often only too excessreading, whereby we accumulate much information without digesting it, which results in our accustoming ourselves -our memory- to keep house for taste and sensibility— what with this, I say, it needs a profound philosophy to restore our feelings to their original state of innocence; to find one's way out of the mass of alien thoughts, to begin to feel, so to speak, and I almost might say, to exist for oneself.

....A good many people maintain a philosophical impartiality about certain subjects, for the simple reason that they understand nothing at all about them.

....True unaffected distrust of human power in general is the surest sign of mental ability.

Saint-Martin:

....All men who are instructed in fundamental truths speak the same language,, for they are all inhabitants of the same country.

Joubert:

....To think that we do not feel is to lie to one's self. Whatever we think should be thought by our whole being, soul, and body.

GIVE me the money that has been spent in war, and I will clothe every man, woman and child in an attire of which kings and queens would be proud. I will build a schoolhouse in every valley over the whole earth. I will crown every hillside with a place of worship consecrated to the gospel of peace.
